The Shape of Government

visage of the Bennett Government emerges pretty clearly. It is evidently to be a Government of high expenditures, high taxes, centralized cabinet control and exceedingly practical politics. Among its ingredients Social Credit is notably absent.

Since the Government refused to submit any detailed appropriations to the Legislature and throttled any chance of financial debate, it is impossible at the moment to examine or predict the result of its new taxa-tion policies. It seems certain, however, that the Government intends to retain and perhaps expand British Columbia's doubtful distinction as the highest-taxed province in

The Government is ravenous and apparently insatiable for new revenues. But how much of its expenditure will go to current account and how much to capital investment will not be known until it is compelled, early next year, to introduce an understandable budget.

However these figures turn out, the Government at all events has succeeded in mastering a pretty passive Legislature, has treated it with an indifference, almost a contempt, unprecedented in our history. Most of its major business was introduced at the eleventh hour to make sure that it could not be adequately de-The House was closed exactly on Mr. Bennett's schedule over the rather faint protests of the Opposition. The next item on Mr. Bennett's schedule is a by-election to provide a seat for Mr. Gunderson. Here he is taking no chances. Since the democratic alternative voting system defeated Mr. Gunderson last June, it is abolished without notice in the expectation that at least he can be

The party which has always attacked party politics as an evil, which says it is not a party at all but a people's movement of reform, shows in its first hours of government, a talent of hard-boiled political manoeuvre unequalled by its prede-

Having concentrated power in his cabinet and largely in himself, Mr. Bennett seems to have succeeded already in eliminating the last vestiges of Social Credit, a myth obviously regarded as useful only in elections. The life-long Conservative intends to provide Conservative government. If any of his followers still believe in Social Credit they may advocate it on the hustings as much as they please, provided they do not seriously propose it in the Legislature. If any of them expected the Government to cut expenditures and taxes, they must explain an opposite policy to their electors as best they may.

The real question is whether Conservative government under a new name is to be good government. That question will not be answered for some time yet. Some useful reforms (the new liquor system, a minor reduction of automobile licenses, exemption of $1 meals from sales tax, votes for 19year-olds, the theory of "equal pay" for women) have been introduced; their vote-getting potentialities are obvious.

But so far as the democratic process and the principles of parliamentary government are concerned, a disturbing start has been made and Mr. Bennett may regret it before long. He cannot expect the Legislature always to remain a rubber

Arms for Japan

THE GOVERNMENT OF JAPAN, obviously against its will, has decided to create a national military This, of course, is specifically forbidden in the Japanese constitution, as drafted in Washington and enforced by General MacArthur, but doubtless some legal loophole will be found. Legal or not, Japanese rearmament will soon be a fact.

The irony of Japan's rearmament under American compulsion is only one of many ironies forced upon the free world by Russian aggression. The rearmament of Germany and the new deal with Franco's Spain are of the same sort and are based on the same unavoidable reasons.

Japan is not asked to create a military establishment which, in the visible future, can be a danger to any foreign nation. The over-burdened Japanese economy at best cannot even support enough soldiers to defend the Japanese islands. But the United States is quite right in believing that if Japan must be defended the Japanese should do what they can instead of relying alto-gether on American strength and

In the grand strategy of the free world Japan is an essential outpost of strength in a defense line along the shores of Asia and merging into the Anzus Pact, which protects the southern Pacific, including Australia Zealand, and may soon, under Sir Winston Churchill's pres-

The case of Japan is peculiarly difficult because the Japanese are now asked to support costly armaments when they are barely able to support themselves. After living largely on American aid during the occupation period, and on American military exenditures during the Korean war, Japan now faces acute economic problems. They can be solved only if Japan, on its tiny and overcrowded islands, is able to trade abundantly with the free world, since it is barred by American policy from its tradimarkets in the Communist world, mainly in China.

To enforce armament on a reluctant and weak Japanese government has not been difficult. It will achieve nothing if the Japanese economy be-hind it is not fortified by the only available method of trade. As Mr. St. Laurent has said repeatedly on behalf of Canada, Japan will be attracted into the free world, as a safe and reliable partner, or into the Communist world if it can find no other alternative.

The question arising out of the latest events in Japan, therefore, is not whether the free nations should ally themselves with Japan, for this has been virtually accomplished, but whether they should trade with Japan. If they refuse to trade the grand strategy of the Pacific, so far as it concerns Japan, will fail,

The Age of Problems

THIS, as The Printed Word remarks, is the Age of Problems. The world has gone through many ages, all neatly labelled by the historians—the Hellenistic Age, for example, the Augustan Age of Rome, the Middle Ages, the Age of Feudalism, the Age of Enlightenment, the Victorian Age. But whatever name it bears every age has been an every age has been an Age of Problems. What distinguishes our age from all others before it is simply that, for the first time the Rutchison ordinary man has felt the Problems in his own life. They have always existed in one form or another but we have begun to grasp them as our ancestors did not. NOT only to grasp them but to revel

N in them. That, indeed, is the distinguishing feature of contemporary man—he is obsessed with problems, is in love with problems and could hardly exist at all without them. If they were all sud-denly solved by tomorrow morning which must be considered doubtful-man uld hardly know how to put in his

MAN is not content with the real and obvious problems of this time, though you would think they were num-erous and complex enough to absorb his energies. He feels it necessary to invent new ones every day. Depend upon it, by tomorrow some economist, professor, scientist or artist will have discovered a brand new life-and-death problem to be printed on the front pages of the news-papers—the remaining space being occupied by older problems already invented and patented but never by any chance

It would almost appear by the public prints that man invents these new problems to take his mind off the old ones, as some men attempt to cure the diseases of the spirit by contracting the disease of alcohol, drugs and other vices.

THUS it becomes not only fashionable I but compulsory to regard every normal aspect of life as a problem. Sex is a problem. Children are a problem. Nay, the cultivation of your own tiny garden, the purchase of an automobile or the choice of a holiday travel route are problems concerning which scientific advice, learned counsel and helpful hints are not only offered but thrust at you on the assumption that everybody is a half-wit during two provincial elections and both members elected were CCF, although the western part of the city voted largely and each voter should vote once. In all these cities the people have a endency to congregate according to their norance that there are actual problems this age. Whether this civilization is to continue, or exterminate itself and all living things overnight, may be recog-nized, even by an optimist like myself, as quite a problem. I go farther and admit that it is an important problem.

we cannot be too optimistic. For the history of man shows that every problem solved invariably creates at least two new ones more difficult. That is why the present age is no more the Age of Problems than any other before or in front of it. With man it is always, from Adam's eviction problem onward, the Age of Problems. But this is the first age with a problem of increasing insanity, caused by worry over problems that, for the most part, do not exist.

to unify our country if that is the only way. That's all there is to it. That was the Korean president's last state-ment, his final summing up, of a long and almost eerily dispas-sionate discussion of the situation in Korea. There was no possibility of mistaking what he said. The only question was whether he meant it. But the question was not easy to answer.

EXTREME CONTRAST

This strange and obstinate old man has a face like a pippin, pale golden, infinitely wrinkled, with little eyes like apple seeds. He speaks unemphatically, in a thin, piping, but still musical voice.

The contrast was really too extreme between the speaker, with his air of being a benevolent Korean professor emeritus, and his words, with their portent of war. But then one remembered how Rhee had submitted to torture and exile, how he had fought by fair means and foul, how he had intrigued and bullied and defied the world, and all in this same cause.

And as he talked onwards, one had to admit there was a kind of logic, lunatic perhaps by some standards but not so lunatic by others, in this position.

Syngman Rhee has so definitely taken.

"President Eisenhower and Secretary but a political method, borned that a political."

Dulles told me they hoped that a political conference would bring good results," he said, with a thin smile. "I agreed to co-operate to the extent of waiting for 90 days beginning October 27. I regard myself as bound after that

But what of the political conference, he was asked. The answer was unequive cal. He doubts whether a conference will be held. If there is a conference he thinks it will produce no agreement "unless the United States surrenders every thing to the Communists, which I do not think the United States will do."

But what then, was the next on. The answer came quietly and with-

"We have to unify Korea or we shall be destroyed in the end. If we are to be destroyed in the end. If we are to be destroyed in any case, why not take our stand now with courage? We have no alternative. Divided we cannot survive. Could you survive with your body cut for the sake of world peace'. I say it for the sake of world peace. I say it is wrong in principle and in sentiment, and I will not do it. It would be worse, far worse, than Munich."

Munich, clearly, is a prime clue to the old man's thinking. After all, the most competent historians of the last war now agree that if President Benes had defied the threats of Hitler and the persuasions of Chamberlain and Daladier, Britain and France would have been forced to come to the aid of Czecho-slovakia in the end. The historians also agree that the outcome would have been better, not only for Czechoslovakia, but also for the major western allies who were so anxious to appease Hitler at Czechoslovakia's expense. Rhee is convinced—or says he is—that here is an exact parellel between this episode of the tragic past and the events that are now unfolding. The truce, he insists, has settled nothing.

The old man also feels or pretends nfidence about what America will do if he orders reluctant yet obedient commanders of the ROK army to renew the Korean War. He is not exactly explicit, but he says quite enough to indicate that he believes America will have to do just about what the historians think Britain and France would have had to do if the Czechs had fought rather than be partitioned in 1938.

"LIKE IT OR NOT"

"I believe the American people will stand by us, whether they like it or not," he said. "The United States has a sense of honor. They started to help us. Will they drop us halfway? They will not buy a short-lived peace by sacrificing an ally. It is out of the question in my mind. For if peace is so sweet that everything has to be sacrificed to peace. the Soviets soon will have the one world

Plainly, of course, Rhee is gambling with gigantic stakes and he may well be bluffing. Plainly too, although he may be able to renew the war if the political conference fails, he will hardly be able to lead his people into another holocaust just because his rearmament program has been cut down by the unification and neutralization project. But plainest of all is another fact.

The Washington tendency to think the Syngman Rhee problem has been or is being dependably solved is both false and dangerous. Rhee may be a willful madman, as so many people be-lieve. His vision of the Far Eastern future may be altogether wrong, al-though it is hard to find flaws in his arguments. But naked courage, whether lunatic or sane, is now so uncommon that even a weak country's leader can still shake the whole world by displaying or just threatening to display this rare human commodity.

'Pen-Pals' Warning

IT'S getting so that you can't take anything at its face value in this suspicious age. That profound observation is inspired by a news item, dated Washington, D.C., to the effect that the U.S. Army, with an eye to unintentional leaks of military secrets, is trying to discourage its servicemen from exchanging letters with unknown persons, including "pen pals" and chain letter corres-

Nancy new slant to that modern institution—the "pen pal." I must confess that, after reading some of those that have appeared from time to time in letters-to-thecolumns of Canadian papers, I have more than once suspected the writer of material—sometimes of matrimonial—motives, but I had never associated them with anything subversive.

CUNNING CHANNEL

However, now the authorities have pointed it out, I can see that the "pen pal" idea might be exploited by those seeking a cunning channel by which comrades of Rad-or even pink-persuasion could garner grains of information from an unsuspecting but communicative correspondent. And it makes me speculate as to who, if anyone, responded to the plea for "pen pals" put forward in this

ago. Not that all "pen pal" pleas are deserving of suspicion, of course. The Red Cross, for instance, has encouraged the exchange of letters between Canadian school children and those of other countries to good purpose. A sound foundation of international standing has thus been laid down between youngsters at an edge when such foundations are likely to prove firm and lasting.

The same spirit, I am sure, animated the writers of letters that were sent to the editor of this paper about five years ago by several natives of Nigeria, British West Africa. These epistles were quaintly worded. One of them signed jointly by Prince Joshua TOMSON, Prince Koku Equagoo, and Prince Alowulodun Briyers, reads:

"Your good name and fancy address was just fortunately introduced to me by a certain friend of mine that you are the best publisher in the world. IT'S MY VIEW

Earnest proponents of the manly art known in sport as Canadian football should be more earnest than ever today as the immediate result of the visit of Annis Stukus Saturday. Manager, coach, bell-ringer and story-teller for the B.C. Lions, the football club from Vancouver which is WIFU bound in 1954, big Stuke must be classed as football's No. 1 ambassa-

The "Loquacious Lithuanian," as he has been dubbed affectionately on the gridiron and by his colleagues along press row, is football personified.

Currently engaged in preparations for what will eventually be the play entitled "the big gamble." Stuke is attempting to put senior football in its rightful place in the true west, namely B.C. Thus the title of the team—the B.C. LIONS.

His crusade started when he couldn't "quit football for good," which he was supwalker posed to have done last year and returned to his loved (but not so beloved as football) typewriter.

Since April last he has been ringing doorbells and watching young huskies with "hell for leather eagerness" banging their heads together in scrimmage.

"You can't win the Grey Cup without Canadians," he says.
"And when they asked me in the east: "Where are you going to get your Canadians, Stuke?" I really didn't know, but I do

"Maybe I am crazy," he commented. "They all told me I was when they heard I was going to invade the land of soccah and "ruggah, but right now I can tell you that we're further advanced in Vancouver than we were in Edmonton at

12 Years and a Broken Back Later

Stuke, it will be recalled by the ever increasing horde of those who spend their Saturday afternoons and evenings in October tuning the dial for the grid scores and play by play, was the same Annis Stukus who put Edmonton on the 100t-ball map in 1950 and 1951. He scored 57 points between luneheon engagements and coaching the Esks, almost winning the league scoring title.

And this after 12 full seasons in the tough grind of big-time football which the Canadian game undoubtedly is today. Even a broken back in 1937 failed to deter him from his one love, a love which now has become a life's aim to put a kid with a football on every vacant lot.

For a time it appeared as if an ulcer, which took to kick-ing field goals when they were least expected and appreciated less, would stick big Stuke behind the keyboard of a type-writer for good. But when the call "come west, young man, come west." kept ringing in his ears to the tune of a $30,000 three-year contract, Stuke shoved the copy desk into the corner and decided he'd take a gander at B.C.'s, rugged stock from which future Grey Cup champions may be moulded

Proof of the Pudding That Cooks

That Stuke has already partially succeeded at Vancouver where sports fans are like the fabled character from Missouri—"you've got to show me"—is the fact that 4,000 came to ogle at the recent exhibition game between his Lion Cubs and Victoria Vampires.

In contrast, Stuke points out with pride and a lucrative eye to the future that only slightly over 5.000 "soccah" fans attended the highly advertised and theoretically tremendous attraction, the North American championship.

All the barriers that the WIFU strung in the path of the Lions, or will, be hurdled by May 1 of next year, says Stuke.

The big stinger of course, is football fans with $2.40 in their pocket each Saturday. But now that Vancouver is assured of a 25,000-seat stadium (courtesy of the British Empire Games) with 12,000 seats under cover, the obligation that

6,500 season tickets must be sold by May 1, is virtually beaten. Sixteen hundred mainlanders already have pledged .nembership tickets in the club, this natural gimmick providing

And don't doubt that the Grey Cup final awon't be played in the west next year, specifically in Vancouver.

Pulp mill officials at Port Townsend think it hardly likely that hydrogen sulphide gases discharged from their plant can be guilty of discoloring paint on Oak Bay homes.

"A far-fetched theory," said acting manager Harry E. Bukowski, of the Crown-Zellerbach International Pulpwood

Mr. Bukowski admitted that at "odd times" the fumes from the pulp processing plant had reacted on white homes in the Port Townsend area. "But it is not a constant com-plaint and it usually washes off," he added.

Asked if he thought the gas could condense in a fog and be carried across the strait (about 25 miles as the fumes fly), the official laughed.
"It is hardly possible," he said.

False Teeth Often Have a Certain Odor!

Soak your plates in Polident daily to avoid "Denture Breath"

The Groot "Denture Breath"
Polident is the specially designed cleanser that keeps false teeth—and breath—clean and fresh always. Follow these simple rules.

1. Nover use a brush on them! Your dental plates are much softer than natural teeth. Brushing wears down fitting ridges so they get loose.

2. Never use sonp or teethpotte! They can leave film which collects bacteria and food particles, a major cause of offensive "Denture Breath."

talk to each other freely or it ends up in a fight. We snap at each other continually and then he always tells me that I'll probably grow up one of these days. I'm getting so I don't know which way to turn. I feel that if things are like this now, what will they be rlock like after we exchange marriage vows? Please e find the right road to take, one with no tragic regrets." (A)—The only road for you to take, as I see it, is to break your engagement to this young man. He has a superiority complex, due either to his age or to his sex or to some other fancied edge over you. You can see from the way he is be having now what is in store for you if you are foolish enough

Unquestionably he feels he is more mature than you or he would not refer to your "growing up" so constantly. He knew when he asked you to marry him that he was older. It is certainly not very sportsmanlike of him now to throw it back in your face that you are immature in his eyes. Think of what marriage life would be. No matter what you did or said he would treat it as a sign of your "immatulity. The chances are that you would take it no better than you now do and your life with him would be a contiuous battle. This is not a pretty prospect, is it?

IN TUNE WITH THE TIMES TOWN OF THE PARTY OF

Looking for something slightly different in radio listening? Why not stoop for a change, to the lowly of the low, the "disc jockey" program?

The program in mind is, for those who haven't already discovered it, the "Vic Waters" show, strictly "canned," but most entertaining.

Music employed is mostly modern, often amusing, and sometimes unique

But it is not the music that makes the show. By far the most interesting feature is smooth, subtle, amusing and sometimes hijarfunny patter.

M'sieu Waters is so popular with his tans, and sometimes I agree with them, that they often demand more talk and less music. All in all, Mr. Waters, with his rather sly brand of humor, his pleasant attitude, and his quiet voice (which by the way makes even commercials not too annoying) is a wonderful change from the usual brash, blaring manner that so often clutters the air-waves.

You may find Mr. Vic, tunes, humor and all, any evening, excluding week-end of course, CJOR at 9.15. Give a listen! HIGHLIGHTS

LONDON (UP)—Prime Minister Winston Churchill said today he still believes in informal, high-level talks between Soviet Russian Premier Georgi M. Malenkov and western leaders.

Churchill made the statement, after week-end talks with Secretary of State John Foster Cretary of State John Foster Pulles, at the first meeting of the House of Commons after its three-mont summer recess.

Referring to the new Allied note inviting Russia to a conference o. foreign ministers in Lugano. Switzerland, Nov. 9. Churchill said he hopes Soviet Foreign Minister Vycheslav M. Molotov will agree to the conference.

"Nevertheless, there is no change in our views," he continued. "We think that friendly, informal personal talks between the leading figures might do good and could not do much harm."

Churchill brushed aside a question about reports he might go to Moscow alone to meet Malenkov if President Eisen hower refuses to attend a Big Four meeting of top-level leaders.

DOUKS DEMAND RELEASE

NELSON (CP)—More than two dozen Doukhobors staged a disturbance in court here Monday during a hearing of an application for the release of Doukhobor children.

Children of more than 100 Doukhobors jailed on nudism charges are being held at New Denver, B.C., near here.

The Doukhobors, members of the radical Sons of Freedom sect, charged that some of the children had been released to live with relatives other than their parents.

They refused to sign applications to have the children returned to those parents not in jail.

"We want all or none," they shouted. "If we can't have all our children, we don't want any."

When court adjourned, the Doukhobors refused to leave until escorted from the courthouse by four RCMP guards. Outside, some of the women burst into screams and shouled at the officers in Russian.
